REPORT

The DroidLinX Club hosted another hands-on workshop focused on Android Development with Kotlin (Jetpack Compose) and the MVVM (Model-View-ViewModel) architecture. This session aimed to provide participants with a comprehensive understanding of building scalable and maintainable applications.

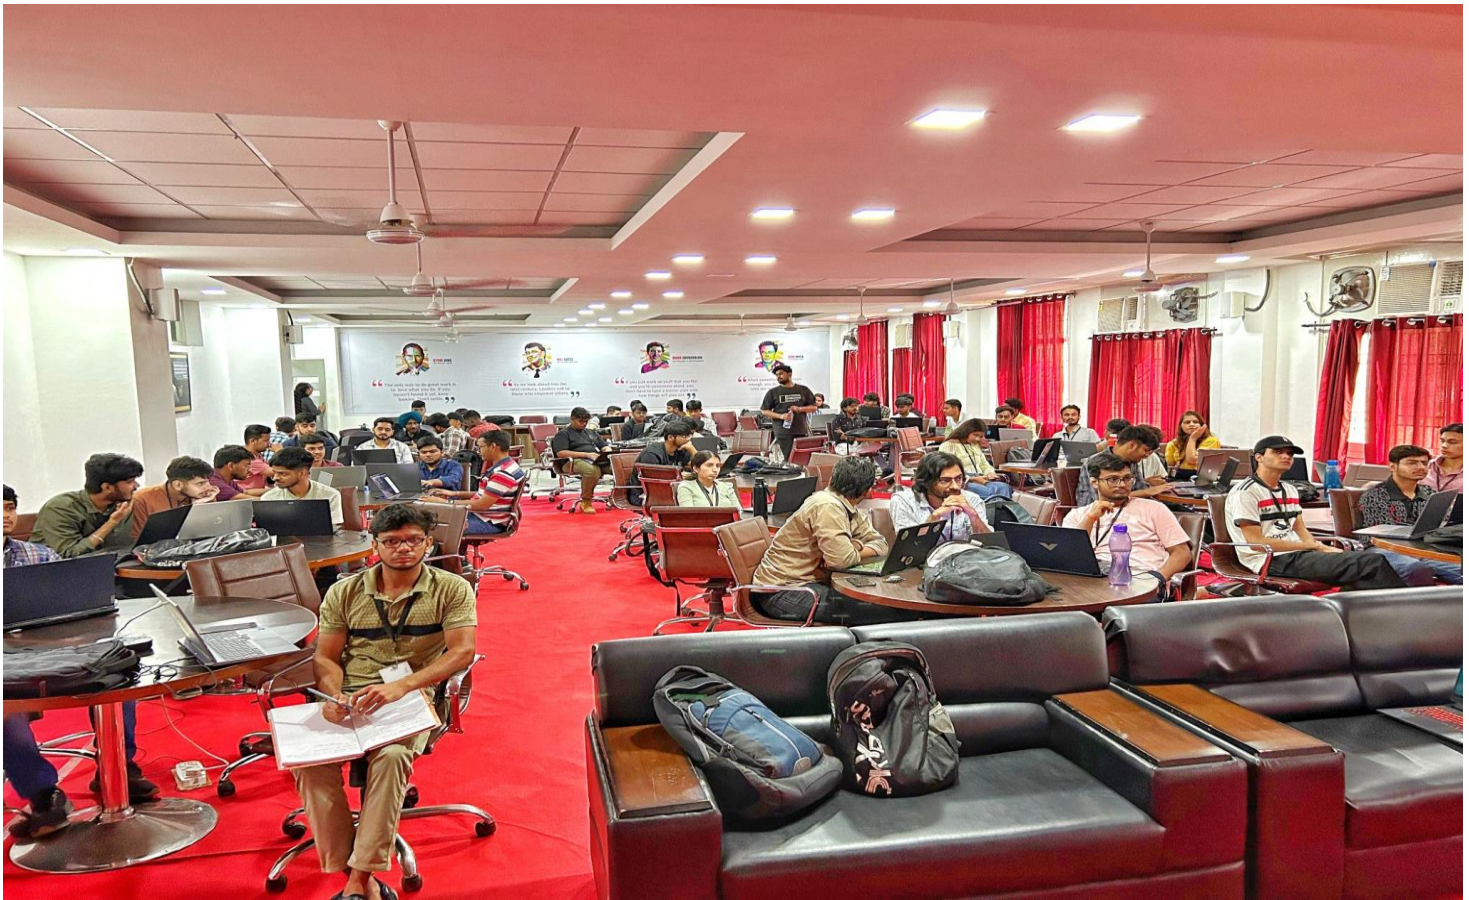

Attendees were introduced to MVVM fundamentals, learning to integrate ViewModel, LiveData, and StateFlow with Jetpack Compose for seamless data handling and UI state management. The workshop also covered essential Kotlin syntax and the basics of Compose, making it accessible to both beginners and intermediate developers.

Through live demonstrations and coding exercises, participants gained hands-on experience in implementing the MVVM architecture while building modern, efficient Android apps. The session emphasized best practices, real-world use cases, and problem-solving strategies, concluding with an interactive discussion on tackling common challenges in Android development.
